

Three seek mayor's chair

Three candidates are in the running for Mayor of Elk Point while five are vying for four seats on Town Council in the October 15 municipal election.

Bernice Capjack-Hugo, current Town councillor Mae Hendrickson and Lyle Frisby are seeking the mayor's chair after Mayor Ed Buck made the decision not to run for re-election.

Incumbent Town councillor Dennis Jasinsky will be joined by Manon Joice, Kathy Riley, Parrish Tung and Dwayne Vogel in the race for Council.

Darrell Younghans of Heinsburg has been elected by acclamation for Electoral Division #A (Elk Point, Heinsburg and Lindbergh) of St. Paul Education Regional Division #1.

Four candidates will seek the County of St. Paul's Division 1 and Division #2 seats. In Division 1, in addition to incumbent Allen Young, candidates in the running are George Sanders, Johnny Lypowy and Dean Smith. In Division 2, which was formerly represented by now-MLA Ray Danyluk, candidates are Sharil Baumgardner, Micheal Chubey, Tom Kurek and Remi Tremblay.

Two candidates are running in each of Divisions 3, where Gerald Krankowski is taking on incumbent Don Mudryk, 4, with Maxine Fodness contesting incumbent Mike Bergeron, and 6, with Linnette Newby running against incumbent Frank Sloan, while incumbents Robert Bouchard, Division 5 and Walter Kaprowski, Division 7, are in by acclamation.

Fire protection master plan now in the works for Elk Point

A dozen hours before New York's firefighters and emergency personnel were faced with the largest disaster in US history, Wayne Girven of the Alberta Fire Commissioner's office complimented Elk Point Town Council on an "absolutely excellent" fire protection master plan which had been drawn up by Town manager Myron Goyan and volunteer fire department representative Larry Joice.

The Town had applied in April 2000 for funding, and after receiving grant approval, Goyan and Joice attended one of ten workshops held around the province to assist communities in formulation of fire protection plans. A total of 68 plans have been submitted to date from across the province, Girven said, and Elk Point's is "better than half of those." A total of 115 municipalities qualified for plan funding, and 85 of those indicated they would proceed with the process.

"It is up to municipalities to identify what they want to do with fire protection," Girven said, noting that instead of just attending structural fires, fire departments now attend accidents and spills, set up dangerous goods routes and fight grass fires. Fire departments are "very expensive" to operate, he noted, but "there may be alternative ways to do things and fund them."

Mayor Ed Buck was unhappy that creation of the plan had not involved the entire fire department and Town Council. "I feel the fire department should be totally involved in whatever plan we do. We all have to be part of the plan - it has to involve the whole Council, the fire department and the community." He was also unaware that Elk Point had been given two extensions on the deadline to create the plan, and now must have the completed plan to the fire commissioner's office by November 1. However, Girven said the Town is in "a unique situation. You have already submitted a partial plan, 38 pages long. We won't take your [grant] money back." He suggested that with the level of involvement the mayor had suggested, "it would be an onerous job to get a consensus."

Heinsburg celebrates their railway era

Heinsburg Community Club and the Elk Point Historical Society joined forces Sunday to look back at the era when Heinsburg was the easternmost terminus of the railway line originating in Edmonton.

Visitors toured the long-vacant CN station, where Community Club volunteer Marge Scott presided over the ticket window in the long-benched waiting room and led tours though the four room living quarters, the baggage room and the freight shed. She pointed out the scales salvaged from one of Heinsburg's main street businesses and said the freight cart, which was found loaded with tires outside a service station, is soon to be refurbished by her husband Roy. Outside the freight shed, a gleaming buckboard was loaded with antique trunks and luggage of the steam train era.

Younger visitors were eager to hop into the gas-powered "speeder" which sits at one end of the length of track in Heinsburg's Railway Theme Park, while all ages clambered aboard the big red caboose at the other end. The caboose, donated a few years ago by the Elk Point Historical Society, is soon to be refurbished with new paint and a general cleanup. Some even made the climb into the caboose's cupola for a trainman's view of the community from its second-storey windows.

bished with new paint and a general cleanup. Some even made the climb into the caboose's cupola for a trainman's view of the community from its second-storey windows.

At the far end of the park, local historian Bob Hendriks was conducting tours of the historic water tower, which is the pride of Heinsburg, since its restoration last year.

Following a barbecue lunch, visitors gathered to hear about the history of the railroad which served Heinsburg in its heyday, and listened to recollections of life along the railroad. The Coronado line reached St. Paul in 1921, but was not and review it." The mayor agreed that "the groundwork has been done" but still felt the appropriate Council committee should have been part of the planning process. "The final responsibility ends up at this table. I'm a little disappointed that it got to that stage, and Council has been left hung out to dry." Still, he feels "some good will come out of this, it gives us some guidelines to work with." Girven said it "may have been my fault that I didn't make it clear that everyone had to be involved." The purpose of the plans is "to get people thinking. You may not be able to do some things you would like because you don't have the level of training," he noted, adding that the completed plan "will not be static, it's designed to be changed, to be reviewed and to evolve." Fire chief Ken Palamarek questioned if the plan was mandatory. "We were led to believe it would be mandatory, and we had no alternative but to send people for training and make up a plan." He was told the plan itself will "never be legislated by government, but it may be part of Town policy. A disaster services plan is mandatory, but there may have been a misunderstanding [about the fire protection plan]. What we're trying to do is to get you to prepare a plan so you could be better prepared. It was a voluntary thing," Girven said. Goyan also felt the course was mandatory, and apologized to the fire department for misinforming them in this regard. He added that "when we took the course, it didn't make sense to call everyone in before we had something to put before them. The draft is there to be picked apart." The Town will call a meeting with the fire department in the very near future to jointly review the proposed plan.

Council: 'no problem' with trail

Elk Point Town Council agreed that they had "no problem" with a recreational trail crossing Elk Point on the former railway line. It's the agreement which will give the municipality the land that they aren't sure about. Mayor Ed Buck said there are "parts of the agreement I don't really care for" regarding how it will operate when the municipalities get the land.

Maintenance and operating of the land "both prior to and after... will be the responsibility of the municipality to maintain... including bridges, excepting out any major repairs," Buck told Council, and in addition, the Town would have to keep the right of way maintained and free of refuse. "We've got to be prepared to pick up the costs." Environmental concerns are also yet to be addressed, Buck said. "There are some big issues here." He said he issued the stop order on removal of track and ties because at a meeting of the ten municipalities in Bonnyville, "we all decided not to let the track be taken out until the agreement was signed... and then the others let them go ahead because the letter of intent said to let them go ahead. I think it will be a long procedure."

Where were you on September 11?

By Deanna Easthope
FCSS Director

September 11 will go down in history as a big day in the USA with American under attack. It was the day that hijackers were able to cause two airplanes to fly into the New York World Trade Centre twin towers, two 110-storey buildings. Another hijacked airplane hit the Pentagon. A fourth hijacked plane went down in Pennsylvania. These acts of terrorism were labeled war attacks.

It is now a week later with stories and reaction talks still taking place. Yes, for those of us who are living today, we will remember where we were on September 11.

To all of those in our community who had friends or relatives who may have been victims of this terrorism attack, our thoughts, condolences and prayers are with you at this time. Life is such a universal gift that when we see those around us lose their lives, it becomes a moment when we realize how valuable the gift of life really is. Life is a gift from God. Except, sometimes it is a n / w o m a n , him/herself who will end the gift of life of another person. Of course this is wrong, not only for the people who lost their lives, but also for the rest of us who are living. We feel it emotionally and spiritually. In other words, it affects our whole being. Our sense of faith, trust and security of being is now being questioned. This is really the aftermath that is very costly.

Earl Nightingale said

it this way: "There's an old Arabian proverb that goes: A fool may be known by six things: anger without cause; speech without profit; change without progress; inquiry without object; putting trust in a stranger; and mistaking foes for friends." Somehow this thought fits. We ask the question: How did security get broken and terrorists were able to board those airplanes? Did security put trust in a stranger? I am afraid the answer is more complicated. A the same time, some of the components of this old Arabian proverb probably fit.

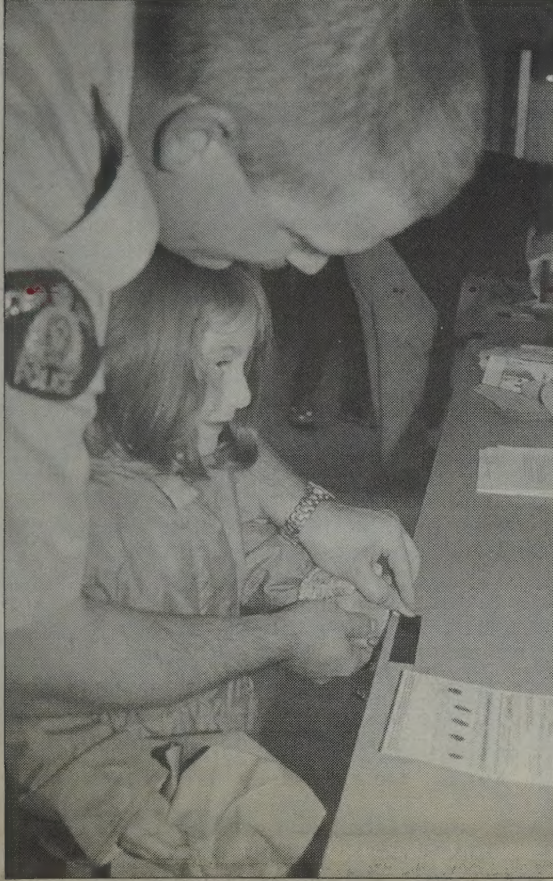

Even though this terrible event occurred on September 11, this day was also memorable in our community of Elk Point. It was our community Information Night which was held at the Elks Hall from 7 to 9 p.m. First of all, we would like to say a big thank you to the Elks for the use of their building for Information Night. Thank you, Elks. We would like to say thank you to all the exhibitors. Thank you for displaying what you do. You are a part of our community and we appreciate you. Thank you. To all the community people, families and children - thank you for coming to Information Night. We hope you were able to learn more about your community.

The special guest for the evening was Henry "Gizmo" Williams, also known as "the Giz," who is a retired Edmonton Eskimo football player. Thank you, Henry, for coming to Elk Point. Then of course, we can't forget our very own Mr. Sports Elk Point, Doug Bassett, for being a companion to "the Giz." Your help in making "the Giz" feel welcomed was greatly appreciated. Thank you, Doug.

Again, let me say on behalf of Faye and myself, thank you, everyone, for coming to Information Night 2001.

SAFEGUARDING OUR CHILDREN -- RCMP Special Cst. Rob Harms places the fingerprints of a small Information Night visitor on a Child Identification form for her family's records.

VIEWPOINTS

TRAIL PROMOTER Shiela Thompson was busy getting out information about the proposed recreational trail and asking for voters' support on election day at the FCSS Information Night in Elk Point last Tuesday night.

Excited about the trail

To the Editor:

I am very excited about the multi-use trail planned for the public in North-eastern Alberta. This will be a shared recreational trail right at home for everyone.

I currently make my home in Edmonton, but grew up in Elk Point. The opening of the trail in North-eastern Alberta is not guaranteed just yet, it is going to a plebiscite.

I truly hope that everyone votes yes for the trail. My husband and I are trail enthusiasts in Edmonton and enjoy jogging and cycling. With a yes vote, we would be in training for a bicycle trip to Elk Point, and the great thing about this trail is that if the training doesn't go that well we could make the trip on sleds. We hope to have the opportunity to use the trail near my hometown soon.

Vote Yes.

Letters to the Editor

Clarification, goals, accomplishments

To the Editor:

A Clarification: Today's most popular selling ATVs meet or exceed CARB 2006 (California Air Quality Standards for the Year 2006), which is a higher standard than most automobiles on the highways meet today. ATVs can damage vegetation, yet that has not been the case on the developed Iron Horse trail due to its gravel bed and destination oriented usage. Yet, until ATVs have in place an organization that will look after all of its own use issues including proper liability insurance protection for the regional corridor, we could not endorse or ask for the acceptance of ATVs. Those items are certainly achievable, but will require responsible club development first, and as with the rest they must be compatible for use on the trail. That final decision, as well all decisions regarding our local corridor, will lie in the hands of the municipalities, anyway.

RRTS Goals

To build a year-round recreational trail in N.E. Alberta similar to the Historic Carlton/Victoria Trail route. The use of that trail from inception to as long as it will exist will depend on what the people of the area will approve of and benefit from, and those uses will change as times change.

And Accomplishments:

1. Operate and gain experience with a successful trail amenity for the area, that being the Iron Horse Trail. Key elements in that 'stewardship' being respect and protection of adjacent landowners' lifestyles, financially self-sufficient maintenance of the trail, and ongoing enhancement of this public facility. We never said that it was perfect, but it is very close.

2. Secure the irreplaceable rail corridor intact for the public of the region to benefit from in many ways rather than see it left in questionable condition and dissected forever. This has been accomplished.

3. Provide information in order to assist the municipalities in their negotiations to make the best deal possible with CN. This has been accomplished.

4. Not interfere with or jeopardize those negotiations, as they are complex enough.

5. Explain to the public our plans and goals. LISTEN carefully to, and respectfully attempt to address the concerns of those possibly affected by the project. And to offer our commitment to work with them. Done repeatedly.

6. To look above the sometimes unnecessary, and not always accurate statements of objection, knowing full well that reasonable people will see through the smoke into the clear realities of today's possibilities and those of the future.

7. To look far into that future, considering the issues around us today and tomorrow, realizing that a proactive approach to such a regional improvement is not necessarily an easy thing to accomplish.

8. To formulate a similar, yet more serious, as well as expanded plan from our Iron Horse experience and from public input on the use, responsibility, insurance, liability, costs, noise, speed, littering, trespass, etc. concerns in order to ensure the long term success of the project. Ongoing.

9. To inform the public of the region of the facts behind the project, and clear up any bits of misinformation that may have accumulated. Work in progress.

10. To ask you, the people of this large rural community to look well ahead, considering that there are reasonable solutions for those that live especially near the corridor, and most importantly to consider the benefits of such a multi-use corridor for the generations of the future. From today until Oct 15.

11. And finally to say thanks for contributing to the safety, the well-being, and the strong community within which we all live. Always.

What part of this project will your grandchildren remember you for?

Signed:

We can only gain by adding a trail to to area's attractions

To the Editor:

As a long time area resident and business owner, I have monitored the debate over the development of a trail along the railway right-of-way. I believe that the importance and long term implications and possibilities transcends the self interests of individuals regardless of where they stand on this issue.

First of all, I strongly believe that it is of utmost importance that the right-of-way remain intact so it is available in the event a railway track becomes necessary in the future. I believe the economics that will result from the decision made by county residents whether to accept development of a trail or not may impact the Town of St. Paul and County of St. Paul more than may be apparent on the surface. It is important to note the effects of promoting or not promoting tourism / economic development in St. Paul Town or County will be felt by all.

The Town and County are intrinsically linked and economic development or lack of it will materially affect all of us. Our local economy is about to go through transition with the loss of the rail line and the resulting grain transportation changes. Is it prudent to deny or indeed stop the potential economic potential inherent in the orderly development of a multi-user trail? I have heard the arguments put forward by both sides and I believe that there is some misinformation particularly on the issue of insurance.

There are precedents across the country particularly in Ontario and Quebec where managed, insured, regulated trails have existed for many years. It seems to me that land owners would appreciate the coverage a trail organization would have in protecting both parties. Is it better to have no regulation, no insurance, no organizational structure to deal with problems?

The trail would provide an outlet for hikers; joggers, horse people, snowmobilers, ATVers, etc. When problems do arise then there is a mechanism for recourse available through the trail organization. It will take time, and a concerted effort to iron out the many complexities of a project of this magnitude.

I am convinced that on the whole we as a community, both urban and rural citizens, can only gain by adding this trail as another of the many attractions to our area. In this period of economic transition we can ill afford to prevent potential economic development in this area. I would like to see the town and county continue the path of positive development and continue providing a positive structure for our children.

"Gizmo" Williams: a class act at Info Night

By Doug Bassett
Review Sports

It was hard to think of anything else on that day, but it was still nice to see such a good turnout last Tuesday night at Information Night in light of what had happened. It was one of those events in history that you will always remember what you were doing when it happened. I know I will. A piece of history that you wish you could forget. It boggles the mind and really makes you stop and think how lucky we really are, living here and raising your kids in small town Alberta.

What a class act this guy is, Henry "Gizmo" Williams. The guy has played 17 years of professional football, been in five Grey Cups and has two huge Grey Cup rings to prove it. Does he still want to play? No. Why? Well, he told me he had his fun, it was time for someone else to shine. He wanted to be remembered as a great player, not continue to play until he was so-so, or come back and play just for money. The game, for him, was not about money, it was about pride. Now, he still works for the Eskimos, promoting the game, talking to kids about staying in school, doing loads of charity work and has golfed 120 rounds this year. He's way busier now than when he played enjoys every minute of it. We need more guys in this world like Henry.

Just in case you missed it last week, there's still hockey registration going on this Wednesday and Thursday at the A. G. Ross Arena. League and Zone meetings are getting underway, so sign up today. And don't forget the work bees every Monday night. Come on down and lend a hand.

Heinsburg celebrates their era as a railway terminus extended to Elk Point until 1926 and Heinsburg in 1927. Marvin Bjornstad told the group that original plans for the line would have taken it straight east from St. Paul to the Ferguson Flats area, with a divisional point at Frog Lake and the line continuing east to Onion Lake and Frenchman Butte. Many settlers made their homes in the area along the proposed route, but a second survey in 1924 moved the line south to travel through Elk Point and Mooswa (now Lindbergh) to the end of the steel at Heinsburg.

Stories of the building of the line came from historical writings of Neal Edwards and Steve Andrishak. Horse-drawn scoops called fresnos did much of the work, while an elevator grader drawn by 56 horses helped to move 1200 yards of gravel per day by loading it into the dump wagons which hauled the material onto the line where it was spread and tamped.

Steve Andrishak was seven years old when the work crews moved to the gravel pit west of Elk Point, and recalled visiting many times and being fascinated with the massive steam shovel and the project supervisor's tame bear. Andrishak said construction progress was amazingly rapid, with the "loud, shrill whistle" of the first train on September 22, 1927 greeted by "many happy people."

Many trains of the day were pulled by the 46-ton Consolidated locomotive which burned 22 tons of coal, all pitched into the 8 by 15 foot firebox by a fireman with a #8 scoop shovel, on a single trip to Edmonton if it was pulling a heavy load.

Local historian Bob Hendriks told the crowd about the buildings and equipment which make up today's theme park. The water tower was completed in 1930 and is the only 60,000 gallon water tower in the province that remains on its original site. The caboose is of 1976 vintage and spent some years on a coal train hauling from Tumbler Ridge, BC. Because it also spent some time on the Georgia Line in the US, it has bullet-proof glass, necessary because of an unfortunate habit of pranksters who take potshots at trains.

Speeders were often used in the early days to transport expectant mothers to hospital, as well as for their railway checking duties.

Heinsburg's station was built in 1950, a CN Class 4A structure 40 feet by 60 which cost approximately $25,000 to construct. It is scheduled to receive a new roof in the near future and the community hopes to eventually develop it into a museum and tea house.

Recollections of life along the railroad and working on the railroad were also part of the day, with stories of riding the train alone at age 5, riding the train from Heinsburg to Ashmont each week to attend high school with boarding facilities, and of working on the railroad as a section man. Ken McManus, originally from Owlseye and a telegrapher in 103 railway stations during his career, said he is "still in love with trains, or I wouldn't be here."

Heinsburg celebrates railway era

Roy Scott's father worked on the railway as a blacksmith, his uncles worked on the building crew and his aunt worked in the cookhouse. Ron Onusko's grandfather was part of a group of 30 farmers from Redwater who in 1898, walked to Fernie, BC to work on the building of the railway.

Just over 50 people attended the event, including a large contingent who traveled down the Iron Horse Trail on ATVs. One man said he was "truly inspired by the trip. What has been done here is just marvelous. It is a gift to all of us. If more people did the trail, they would understand it."

"SORRY, THERE'S A RAIL STRIKE,"

Marge Scott tells a potential passenger at Heinsburg's station. The crew in the waiting room (below) could also have a long wait for their train.

Midwest Tourism planning "a new start" with conference

"A New Start" is the theme for an upcoming conference of tourism operators hosted by the Midwest Tourism Group on Saturday, October 13 in Heinsburg.

You are invited to "Take the Midwest Trail" to the conference and discover the effect that tourism and marketing has on your business. Three speakers have been confirmed:

Bill Ozard of Travel Alberta, who will speak on "Interpreting Tourism," Ken Ebert, a business owner who will speak on marketing, and Jars Balan of Kalyna Country, who will speak on eco-tourism and volunteers in tourism. There will also be a session on creating business plans which will help Midwest to compile a consolidated business plan which is necessary if the group is to obtain matching grant funding to promote the area.

Midwest is unique in that it offers members a website page of their own within the www.midwesttourism.com website, giving them excellent exposure to tourism markets in North America and around the world.

Who is a tourism operator?

Almost any business operator fits in this category, from restaurants and gas stations to tire shops, sporting goods stores, craft and souvenir stores, to antique shops, as well as municipalities, chambers of commerce, museums, campgrounds, hotels, motels, bed and breakfast operators, historic sites and attractions of all kinds, from trail rides to petting zoos. If you deal with the traveling public or people who come to town for your events or to visit your business or attraction, you're in tourism.

Where is Midwest?

Midwest Regional Tourism Group covers an area stretching from Elk Point, Vermilion and Wainwright in the west to Paradise Hill, Frenchman Butte and Maidstone in the east. With over 30 businesses at the current time, the group is currently in a period of expansion and is looking forward to further growth.

If you would like to learn more about the conference or to register, contact Elizabeth Gauthier at (306) 825-7071 or by email, admin@midwest-tourism.com.

what's NEWS at the LIBRARY?

Come in and check out the Internet on our computer

By Daphne Schnurer
Librarian

Did you know that computer use at the library is free to the public? Many of our patrons use the library's computer to check out the Internet. The Internet is a great place for information. Try out some of these websites:

-Discoveryalberta.com and travelalberta.com are a great help if you're looking for accommodation or sites of interest.

Allposters.com is a super website for posters and prints of everything you can imagine for all ages.

Allrecipes.com has great new ideas and recipes.

Some search engines for our farmers are www.agrisurf.com and ropintheweb.com, the Alberta Agriculture Food and Rural Development website, which has everything from 4-H info to news, market reports and weather.

New Books

On this week's hot list:

The sequel to Dances with Wolves - in The Holy Road, master storyteller Michael Blake at long last continues the story.

Perri O'Shaughnessy's latest work, Writ of Execution, is an electrifying tale of high stakes money and cold-blooded murder.

Also just in are some great new books with inspiring ideas for crafts, cooking and decorating: Garden Style, Fabulous Ideas for Flea Market Finds, 1001 Great Tips for Decorating Shortcuts, Cane,

Rush and Willow, Herbal Gifts, as well as some great new craft books and magazines.

Thank You!

Special thanks this week to Sherry Pelech and Lynn Urquhart for looking after the table at Information Night. Also thanks to Vicki Brooker and Sherry Pelech for organizing our Seniors' Tea each month.

LIBRARY VOLUNTEERS Lynn Urquhart and Sherry Pelech visited with Sharon Kuhn, manning the United Church booth, and Irene Melin, who stopped by to try her hand at piecing together one of the puzzles on the library's display table.

HELP CELEBRATE!

Friends, neighbors & relatives, please accept this as your invitation to come and celebrate

Alberta 4-H introduces a new Bison Project

The Alberta 4-H Bison project is an exciting new opportunity to experience the bison industry. Three different project options enable members to gain knowledge about Alberta bison, and you don't even need to own a bison, much less ride it or show it. Instead, you will learn about the role that bison played in our history, and the value they will continue to have in the new millennium.

Exploring Bison is an ideal project for members who are interested in the bison industry but do not have access to a bison herd. Interested members may choose to get involved in a number of self-directed projects that will allow them to learn about the industry, through options such as bison history, folklore and the value of bison products and byproducts.

Bison Herd Observation is a project for members who have access to a bison herd, either at home or a neighbor's. With this project, members will monitor a specific herd and record their observations in a record book. They may select one project animal that they will observe and record the behavior of, monitor the social order of the herd, and determine the role the selected animal plays within the herd.

Carcass Bison is a project where members will choose a weanling bull for their project animal, and feed it until it is ready for market. At that time it will be sent to slaughter, and carcass information will be obtained. The member will be responsible to choose the time to sell the animal so that it obtains the optimum carcass grade.

If you would be interested in becoming part of a 4-H bison project, come out to Elk Point 4-H Multi Club's first meeting of the year on September 19, 7 p.m. at F. G. Miller High School, or phone Donna Zapesocki at 724-2451.
